Research – Impact on a Changing World

Late last year, 2022's finalists for the Strategic Research Capital round were chosen after a rigorous selection process run by the Deputy Vice-Chancellor. Ten initial expressions of interest were received for this $1.5 million fund.

One of the successful proposals received a $1 million investment spread over three years for "Dynamic Testing and Earthquake Simulation" equipment to be housed in the Structural Engineering Laboratory building. It will advance UC earthquake engineering research (across both civil and mechanical engineering) and potentially leverage industry interest in construction materials testing. Also successful was a proposal for an $850,000 investment in a state-of-the-art "Atomic Force Microscopy Platform", which will have applications across solid state physics, molecular engineering, polymer chemistry, surface chemistry, molecular and cell biology, and materials science and medicine.
